

After The Rain

Well thunder roared last night and lightening burned the sky
And it reminded me of storms that I've had in my life
I'd never heard such noise as I wondered what would be
Then his still small voice drown out the noise and I heard Jesus speak

After the rain you've never felt such peacefulness
I was so frightened in the storm
But in God's heart it's for my best
And perhaps there'll be a time
When another storm will come
But I've learned after the rain
You will always find the Son
I've learned after the rain
You will always find God's Son

Child you're not going through, a valley no one else has known
The truth is in your footsteps, many walked on their way home
Between this world and heaven you will have to face the storm
But when your journeys ended the only noise you'll hear is joy
